Once upon a time, there was a bear family that lived in the forest. Everyday, Father Bear and his son went to look for honey while Mother Bear worked at home.

Little Bear loved to paint.
He sketched the portraits of his friends.

Little Bear was not good at finding honey so his father was not happy. His father told him to focus only on finding honey for his family. He was scared to paint in front of his father.

The headmaster, Mr. Owl, said,
"Mr. Bear, your son is a talented painter. You should send him to art school." Mr. Bear didn't agree.

One day, when Mr. Bear was trying to get honey, he fell down and broke his leg. He couldn't go to work and the family faced many difficulties.

The animals tried to help the family since Father Bear couldn't work. They brought the family lots of food and presents so they would be okay.

When friends came to the house they saw Little Bear's paintings. Father Bear was very pleased that everyone loved Little Bear's paintings.

Father Bear said, "Son, you should go to art school to study painting, but please also try to learn our family work finding honey."

Now, with the help of Mr. Owl,
Little Bear is attending art school.
He was so happy to learn about what he loved and also help his family to find honey.

Father Bear, Mother Bear and Little Bear lived happily together.
The end.
